

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service! I urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. I am concerned that this proposal could make my current service unaffordable.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is unfair!

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share. I urge you to reject the proposal to move the USF collection system to a flat-fee.

Keep the USF Fair!

Instead of raising rates for individuals, why not just take cell phones and every other amenity (you know, water, electricity, cars, etc.) away from everyone with a net worth of less than $1 million? The Bush administration considers the middle and lower classes a useless impediment to the wealthy elite's goals and pleasures, so while you're at it, why not just lock us all up and let us make license plates for your Jaguars and Mercedes? Oh, except those over 65, who are so useless they can't even make license plates. You can put them on an ice flow and let us drift out to sea, then crow about "saving" Social Security for those who "really need it" (people with net worths of more than $1 million and big corporations).

Sincerely,

Sandra Dollar
